FROM the OLD ARMADILLO:

Our website, www.founderlionsclub.org, is up and ready for your use. We add something new each week. Soon it will be completed. Why not check it out each week and learn something.

This is a classic vaudeville routine done by Abbott and Costello, that sets the "slickster" character of Bud Abbott, and his willingness to con his buddy Lou Costello when needed.

Bud Abbott: Have you got two tens for a five?

Lou Costello: Yeah.

Bud Abbott: There we are. There's your ten.

Lou Costello: (irritated) Come on, come on! (continue on Page 2)

Bud Abbott: What's the matter with you? Something wrong?

Lou Costello: Yeah, fifteen dollars went south!

Bud Abbott: What do you mean?

Lou Costello: You give a lot of fast talk! You say, "give me two tens for a five" and I give it to you.

Bud Abbott: Oh, you did? Wise guy! Okay, here's your five, give me back my two tens.

Lou Costello: That's better.

Bud Abbott: Now get out of here.

From the old Abbott and Costello radio show:

Bud Abbott: Costello, do you know anything about lions?

Lou Costello: Do I know anything about lions? 'Course I know lots of things about lions! One time I went lion hunting in Africa with my brother, and brought back a stuffed lion.

Bud Abbott: What was the lion stuffed with?

Lou Costello: My brother. (pause) You're not getting me into that cage with that lion, brother!

Bud Abbott: Oh, you've nothing to worry about. That lion was raised on milk.

Lou Costello: So was I, but I eat meat now!
